Produced by the last 'Beetler' in Ireland, Seed is crafted using the unique traditional technique of Beetling that dates back to the early 1700s. The lightweight fabric goes through a process where the woven fabric is pounded with wooden mallets (called 'beetlers') resulting in a flat finish on both the face and reverse sides. The result is a high sheen, lustrous, crisp, and almost paper-like quality. Beetled linen is delicate and will become more interesting in character as and when the fabric marks from contact with moisture. Please note that the fabric has a width of 132cm which is slightly narrower
