French 19th century decorative perfume burners, also known as "brûle-parfums," were exquisite objects that blended artistry and function. Crafted from materials like porcelain, bronze, and glass, these burners often featured elaborate designs, including classical motifs, floral patterns, and romantic scenes. They were popular in salons and boudoirs, used to disperse pleasant fragrances and elevate the ambience of a space. Notable manufacturers like Sèvres and Baccarat produced these pieces, which reflected
